Dear Madam, dear Sir

We gladly welcome you at the IPSA 23rd World congress of Political Science, this time in Montréal, Canada!

We hope you had a pleasant journey, and have a wonderful time in Canada.

For you, we have prepared this specific catalogue so you can comfortably leaf through those huge pages and find out anew how busy our authors—knowledgeable academics from all around the globe—have been keeping us.

Since you belong to those academics who are not limited in interest and knowledge by national boundaries, we are sure that you will find the same attitude reflected in the two Budrich Publishing Houses' book lists.

I have built Barbara Budrich Publishers and Budrich UniPress in order to provide a forum that is European to start with, and does go beyond, i.e. global, intentionally. Unlike the multinational corporate giants, we are independent, and free to take publishing decisions regardless of share holder interests.

Thus, we want to support you and your discipline, as part of the academic community in Political Science, in International Relations—as well as in Social Sciences, Gender Studies—by offering great publishing opportunities, and, as a result, great books as well as journals.

Wishing you an inspiring time,
Kind regards

The Development of the Field

2012. 230 pp. Pb.
26,00 € (D), US$39.95
ISBN 978-3-86649-105-2

Although the concept of power is central to the study of politics, there is no agreement as to what exactly power is. Power is often viewed negatively, as domination, though it is also the case that power is created by people acting in concert, in which case it can have positive effects. Making sense of this puzzle is one of the aims of this book, which provides the reader with a clear and coherent way of understanding the various forms and manifestations of power.

The World of Political Science – The Development of the Discipline Book Series

Edited by Michael Stein and John Trent

If you are a political scientist or practitioner you will be interested in the World of Political Science Book Series which was designed to satisfy each of these needs. - A state-of-the-art survey of current activities;
- A study of conditions in methodology, concepts, training and communication of research;
- A synthetic overview analysis and explanation of developments and trends;
- A critical perspective focusing on present strengths and weaknesses with suggestions for the future.

The Berghof Handbook II

2011. 559 pp. Pb.
49,90 € (D), US$75.95
ISBN 978-3-86649-327-8

Following the first volume of its Handbook for Conflict Transformation in 2004, Berghof Conflict Research (Berlin) now presents Volume II. This edition collects new insights into nonviolent ways of managing inter-group conflict and what is needed for consolidating positive peace.

The Berghof Handbook reflects the state of debate from a variety of disciplines, advancing discussions on the theory and practice of conflict transformation. Topics include, among others: global trends in organised violence, the role of gender relations and asymmetries in conflict, third-party intervention and insider approaches, human rights, transitional justice and reconciliation in post-war societies. It addresses all those who are interested and active in the fields of conflict prevention and management, development cooperation, human rights and post-war peacebuilding. The Handbook is designed for practitioners and scholars who seek ideas and information for their own work and wish to draw on the wealth of experience gathered by colleagues in a wide range of regions and contexts. The Handbook is further intended to inform experts in politics, journalists, teachers and students.

The Governance of Small States in Turbulent Times
The exemplary cases of Norway and Slovakia

2012. 269 pp. Pb.
29,90 € (D), US$45.95
ISBN 978-3-86649-430-5

What is special about small states? How do they adapt their policies and patterns of governance to meet turbulent times such as a new security environment and the international financial crisis? Answers to these and further questions are provided by experts.

This book seeks to answer these questions by taking a comparative perspective on the processes of change and adaptation in the governance of Norway and Slovakia. These two small European states with highly open economies have been exposed to the same set of global turbulences related to post Cold War changes in the security environment and the global financial crisis; they are also facing internal challenges that spring from rapidly rising expectations while demographic shifts put pressure on their welfare systems. Their governance structures and processes are informed by their different political-administrative cultures, different history and levels of stability of democratic governance structures and, indeed, by their different modes of attachment to the European Union and other regional integration frameworks.

Do norms of justice, human rights and democracy enable disenfranchised communities? Or do they simply reinforce relations of domination between those who are constituted as dispensers of justice, rights and aid, and those who are coded as receivers? Critical race theorists, feminists and queer and postcolonial theorists confront these questions and offer critical perspectives.

The Politics and Economics of the Eurozone Crisis
An Introduction

The Euro – is it really the crowning achievement of half a century of European integration efforts? Quite the contrary: It seems that the Euro has now become a great threat to the European Union as such. This book explains the impact which the ongoing Eurocrisis has already had on the member states and their inhabitants; and it does so without assuming that the reader is already an expert on any of the topics addressed, making it a both thorough and convenient introduction to the problem area.

Rentierism and Energy Policy in Post-Soviet States

2011. 213 pp. Hc.
24,90 € (D), US$36.95
ISBN 978-3-86649-340-7

The analysis of rentierism in post-Soviet states, which this book presents, underscores the need for further research as rentier state concepts have mainly been applied to "older" rentier states like Arab, African and Latin American countries. An important contribution to a topical discussion.

During the last 30 years, many resource-rich countries have experienced economic and political stagnation ("resource curse"). They have developed deficient political systems in which the process of modern state formation is being undercut ("rentier state") as well as economic structures in which sectors that provide strong incentives for the accumulation of physical and human capital are underrepresented ("Dutch disease").

Is the European Union a unified actor in world politics? The world's leading economic power is still struggling to find its role in shaping and maintaining global peace, free trade and commerce. How successful is the EU's Common Foreign and Security Policy and its institutions really? Renowned experts propose answers to these key questions.

Participatory Democratic Innovations in Europe
Improving the Quality of Democracy?

2013. 327 pp. Pb.
29,90 € (D), US$45.95
ISBN 978-3-8474-0113-1

Representative democracy is often seen as a stable institutional system insusceptible to change. However, the preferences of the broad public are changing and representative, group based democracy has lost importance. This development made it necessary to change established ways of decision making and to introduce participatory democratic innovations. Many national and sub-national governments followed this route and implemented various kinds of participatory innovations, i.e. the inclusion of citizens into processes of political will-formation and decision-making. The authors analyse and evaluate the various effects of these innovations in Europe, providing a bigger picture of the benefits and disadvantages different democratic innovations can result in.

Studying an EU white paper

2012. 193 pp. Pb.
26,00 € (D), US$39.95
ISBN 978-3-86649-483-1

The term of governance and the way it has been used by European institutions have elicited much interest in the academic world. However, the notion and its uses have often been studied only in terms of intellectual development or network analysis. Such researches leave us in the dark on a key question. What meaning does this concept actually hold to the actors involved? To what degree do they have a shared definition of the term? Does "European governance" work as a self-fulfilling prophecy, structuring the space of the EU and the practices of its actors?

2011. 273 pp. Pb.
33,00 € (D), US$47.95
ISBN 978-3-86649-406-0

This is the first comprehensive publication analysing the value added by integrating systemic thinking into peace-building theory and practice.

This book stores up immense usefulness. First, it is written by inter-disciplinary team of scholars enriched by theory and experience of many non-linear conflict contexts. Second, it seeks to bridge the gap between rational, spiritual, emotional and scientific knowledge and builds cycles of peace ranging from early warning, planning, intervention, monitoring and evaluation of peace process. Third, multiple perspectives including a cultural one weaved into a systemic whole have made the book amply broad to capture multi-track mediation, intervention and peace building activities. As the book is a pioneer effort integrating systemic thinking into peace building theory and practice, it is useful to political leaders, policy makers, conflict experts, teachers and students in broadening their understanding about peaceful transformation of complex conflicts into stable peace.

Principles of Distributive Justice

2013. 382 pp. Hardcover.
59,90 € (D), US$89.95
ISBN 978-3-8474-0092-9

There is constant debate around the questions of what constitutes the 'just' distribution of goods and how we can assess existing distribution patterns. Some commentators mistakenly believe that there can be one simple, all-encompassing governing principle that automatically yields the 'fairest' results. In this book Grzegorz Lissowski argues that three types of principles need to be distinguished according to three requirements of justice: equality, impartiality, and unanimity.

 ISBN 978-3-86388-029-3

Negotiations in the European Union Council of Ministers are not only taking place within formal decision-making structures. Member states strive to find allies and coordinate their positions prior to formal negotiation meetings. They either create ad hoc coalitions to pool voting power or co-operate within more durable, institutionalised coalitions that traditionally form due to geographical proximity or among like-minded member states as task-specific coalitions on particular issues. Institutionalised coalitions bestow their members with a bargaining advantage even if they cannot generate enough voting weight to reach voting thresholds.

 The book is written for active learners – those keen on cutting their own path through the complex and at times hardly comprehensible world of THEORY in International Relations. To aid this process as much as possible, this book employs the didactical and methodical concept of integrating teaching and self-study.

The enlarged European Union needs new instruments for exporting stability and change into the fragile regions and countries beyond its borders. That is why the EU is developing and implementing the European Neighbourhood Policy (ENP): a strategic concept which is to enhance the Union's capability to be a driver of reform – without automatically promising the “golden carrot” of membership to the neighbours. This book provides the reader with information on what ENP wants, how it works and what the prospects of the Union's cooperation with neighbouring countries are.
